maxim that "All signs fail in dry weather," Washington is about to enter a period of amusement lethargy that may last until the warm weather is gone. The close of the Belasco after a wabbly hesiof the big theaters in the field of activity. From present indications the Columbia Players seem likely to equal, if not surpass, their phenomenal record of last year. Capacity houses have been comfor the coming week, with "Pudd'n Head Wilson," and the week after, with Billie Burke's play, "Love Watches," give promise of much for the future.

As yet the management withholds the name of Julia Dean's successor in the cast. It is promised, however, that local patrons will not be disappointed when it Unfortunately, Miss Dean's health has been far from good the present summer. She has struggled on in the hope of improvement, but without avail, until now it has become imperative for her to take a complete rest. Miss Dean will be sadly missed by many warm admirers. The remainder of the splendid company, however, remains intact, and here and there strengthening elements have been injected. Its future seems very promising.

Some of the Ben Greet Players, notably the Vivians, Mr. Crawley, Miss Mills and Mr. Allen, will leave pleasant recolentertainment eniovable furnishing during their brief summer engagement in Washington. Mr. Greet, for reasons not explained, seems to have lacked effectiveness this year. His reputation as a great managerial actor was not maintained, in the opinion of many.

With the closing of the Casino for summer improvements and renovation, comes the announcement of the re-opening of the Academy the second week in August. The Cosmos is still under way and the size of its patronage must be encouraging to its management. The new playhouse has become very popular among those who heretofore have not been wont to patronize the lower price theaters and moving picture shows.

A singular lack of activity seems apparent in the suburban resorts in strong contrast with the past few years. Are the river resorts to have a period of returning popularity?
